Headline:
Bright start. Cloud thickening later, with some rain in west.

Today:
Bright start for some, with the odd hazy spell of sunshine. Cloud soon thickening from the west however, with rain spreading east through the morning. This turning persistent across hills some western hills, whilst some eastern parts stay largely dry. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Tonight:
Any rain soon easing during the evening, with clear spells developing. Dry for all by midnight, with light winds and mist patches possible by dawn in prone rural spots. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Thursday:
Fine, with morning sunshine perhaps turning hazier later in the day, along with some fair weather cloud also developing. Winds remaining light and staying dry. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Variable cloud and sunny spells, with just the outside chance of light showers Thursday and Friday. Turning breezy. Likely dry and fine Saturday, however cloud thickening from the southwest later.
